“When Less is More”—Strengthening Community Infrastructure through Creative Collaboration and Capacity Building

This year’s theme underscores the importance of creative collaboration in mobilizing strengths, assets and resources for meeting human needs in local communities. Throughout the state of Oklahoma social workers face numerous issues and challenges in addressing the health and human service needs of rural, frontier, and urban communities. Join colleagues on October 22, 2010 in Norman or through video link in Tulsa in considering practical strategies for strengthening community infrastructure and in building capacity. A post-conference meeting to organize a professional development book club as continuing education among practicing social workers will enable Norman participants to gain an additional CEU.
